

Wangari Maathai Institute to be involved in a new Initiative launched by Hillary Clinton

One of those initiatives is called wPower. wPower looks at the cross-cutting challenges of climate change, access to clean energy, technology, and economic opportunity for women. The partners in this initiative are MacArthur Foundation, USAID, CARE International, Solar Sister, the Global Alliance for Clean Cookstoves, and the Wangari Maathai Institute.

The initiative will provide training for more than 7,000 women entrepreneurs, helping them to sell new technologies, like clean cookstoves and solar lanterns in India, Nigeria, and throughout East Africa.
