

Mass food poisoning in Strathmore university: food safety concern

As the global world battle to entrench food safety culture through the world banks's initiative of Global Food Safety Partnership (GFSP), the issue remains a matter of priority in many countries. From homes to processing industry and institutions of learning, food safety needs more input to prevent costs and deaths related to consumption of unsafe food. Today we regret too read that 300 students and staff of strathmore university, Nairobi. The department of Food Science, Nutrition and Technology takes a keen interest on food safety and wishes the sick quick recovery.