

The department does prepare museum specimens and skeletons. It has been instrumental to many Universities in setting up Anatomy Laboratories both in the country and abroad with the latest being University of Ghana. This is done by highly qualified staff by defleshing the animal and carefully separate each bone of the cow.

The various pieces of bones are then assembled together accordingly, each to its right place unto a final masterpiece as per the specifications of the client. The department is the only one so far with this kind of expertise in the country.

The various pieces of bones are then assembled together accordingly, each to its right place unto a final masterpiece as per the specifications of the client. The department is the only one so far with this kind of expertise in the country.

