

In this comparison of data on Kenyan grasses and grasses growing in different temperate zones, Kenyan grasses have higher CF and lower digestibility and net energy content than the temperate grasses. It was shown that Kenyan grasses are deficient in energy for dairy and beef cattle, the only exception being young Kikuyu grass for beef cattle.