

KENYA NEEDS A NATIONAL INNOVATION ECOSYSTEM

Kenya's capacity to compete in the global market greatly depends on the ability of her people to innovate and apply the relevant technology for growth and development.

In order to achieve this, a national innovation ecosystem has to be built. This was echoed by the key note panelists at the Nairobi Innovation Week.

The keynote panel consisting of Dr. Fred Matiangi, Cabinet Secretary, ICT, Prof. Peter Mbithi, Vice-Chancellor, Jeremy Awori, Managing Director, Barclays Bank of Kenya, Langdon Morris, Co-founder, InnovationLabs LLC, Saul Singer, American-Israeli journalist and author Start up Nations, Eng. John Tanui, CEO, Konza Technopolis Authority, gave insights and challenges on innovation and research in the various sectors.
