The School of Business, University of Nairobi, on Monday 3rd June 2013 played host to several dignitaries as the School, in partnership with Plymouth University Business School launched a report on Entrepreneurship Education in East Africa.

The Schools were commissioned by the UK Department for International Development to assess the capacity of business schools and other institutions to support the development of entrepreneurship in Eastern Africa.

The Research which was done by professor Erasmus Kaijage, Barclays Bank Endowment Chair Professor, University Nairobi School of Business and Professor David Wheeler, Pro-Vice Chancellor and Dean Plymouth Business School, United Kingdom was launched by Prof. Jacob Kaimenyi, The Cabinet Secretary, Ministry of Education who noted that universities through the Schools of Business, are well placed to take the leading role in addressing the challenges of youth unemployment by inculcating entrepreneurial skills into the youth.

He noted that if implemented, the recommendations of the report, which were in line with the goals towards achievement of vision 2030 will contribute greatly to creating employment for the youth.

Other members who attended the launch were The Acting Vice Chancellor, Prof. Henry Mutoro, The DVC Students Affairs Prof. Isaac Mbeche, Acting Principal Prof. Peter KObonyo, The Dean School of Business Mr. Stephen N.M Nzuve and other members of the faculty.
